Youth pushes over senior's scooter in phone theft

ROBBERY A 14-year-old boy allegedly pushed an elderly man off his scooter and tried to rob him yesterday at Victoria Park in Dartmouth. The 74-year-old man was riding his motorized scooter around noon when police say the youth pushed the scooter over, took the man's cell-phone and fled. Two police cadets at nearby Northbrook School heard the victim's cries for help, then chased the boy down. The man was taken to hospital with non-life threatening injuries, while the boy is charged with robbery. PAUL MCLEOD/METRO HALIFAX

Charity mum on Luke

Outcome of hearing over accounting irregularities unknown

DEVIN STEVENS
for Metro Halifax

A missed deadline, a venue shift across town, and a three-hour, late-night board meeting later, the Halifax charity where Rosamond Luke worked won't say if she's still employed.

"We have no comment until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning," said All Women's Empowerment and Development Association chair Brenda Saunders/Todd. Her comments came after a meeting with Luke at the charity's offices wrapped up after 10 p.m. yesterday.

Luke was a Conservative election candidate for two days until her criminal record was exposed earlier this month.

The association suspended Luke with pay last week after accounting irregularities showed up in their books. That suspension was changed to without pay on Monday.

Luke had until 5 p.m. yesterday to explain irregularities. Saunders/Todd said Luke called at 5:17 p.m. to say she was showing up. That moved the meeting from a downtown office building to an office on Joseph Howe Drive.

Former Tory candidate Rosamond Luke rushes past reporters after a three-hour meeting with her employer.

Talks with Luke began around 6:30 p.m. and continued for three hours. After the meeting, she refused to answer reporters as she strode across the parking lot to her car.

Saunders/Todd wouldn't say if the board was satisfied with Luke's answers, or if her group will call police. Only two members of the association's eight-member board are left. The others resigned this week.

Two other members resigned in the spring due to disagreements within the board. Saunders/Todd said she believes those departures were related to Luke. The association closed its doors on Monday, and reports say its three employees have been sent home until further notice.

Wife wants Taser use reviewed

POLICE An Amherst woman wants the town's police department to review its use of Tasers following a recent medical emergency during which her husband was zapped with one.

The woman, who asked that her identity be withheld, said she grew concerned for her husband last Sunday when she could not wake him up. When she checked his blood sugar, she found it was dramatically low.

As the 34-year-old man woke up, he resisted paramedics' attempts to put in an IV, and they asked for police help.

"All of a sudden I heard the officers telling him they were going to tase him. I ran down the hall yelling to them he doesn't understand, but they zapped him anyway," she said.

She said her husband bit off part of his tongue, and couldn't walk for three days afterward.

"He needed their help and they treated him cruelly. The scream that came out of my husband when he was Tasered was the worst thing I have heard in my life."

Amherst Deputy Police Chief Ian Naylor said officers felt the man was a danger to himself and others.

He said all Taser incidents are reviewed by the police force.

El benefit collection on the rise

There were 28,690 Nova Scotians drawing employment insurance benefits in July 2008. That's a 5.8 per cent hike from the month before, but it's down 2.2 per cent from July 2007. METRO HALIFAX

Feeling the pinch

Nova Scotians have been hit hard by the rising cost of gas, shelter and food, according to Statistics Canada. Between August 2007 and August 2008, the consumer price index went up 4.4 per cent in Nova Scotia. That's the third-highest hike in the country, after Yellowknife and Prince Edward Island. METRO HALIFAX

Emotionally explosive day in court for Nora Bernard's family

Family members of slain native elder Nora Bernard greeted her killer with hateful stares and harsh words as he was hastily led into court yesterday morning.

"I want to know if when he looks at his hands, can he see my mother's blood on there ... can he smell it?" asked Bernard's daughter Leanna MacLeod of Hilden.

Gloade

As James Douglas Noel Gloade was led from the sheriff's van, his answer was brief.

"Fuck off."

Gloade, 25, pleaded guilty yesterday to manslaughter in the brutal killing of his grandmother, 72-year-old Millbrook resident Bernard.

Gloade was originally charged with first-degree murder, but pleaded guilty to the lesser charge. The plea comes one day after Bernard would have turned 73.

Bernard, a well-known native activist and champion of residential school survivors was found dead in her home in the early hours of Dec. 27, 2007.

Her death sent shockwaves throughout the community.

Gloade was remanded to custody until his sentencing Oct. 21, which his defence lawyer asked be by way of a native sentencing circle. Sentencing circles involve elders, members of the victim's and accused's families, the lawyers and a judge. In order for the circle to take place the elders of the community would have to agree to accept the case.

Leanna MacLeod of Hilden holds a photo of her mother Nora Bernard. Bernard, a long-time native activist, was brutally killed last year by her grandson James Douglas Noel Gloade. Gloade was in court yesterday morning where he pleaded guilty to manslaughter.

Both the reduced charge and the possibility of using a sentencing circle produced anger and outrage from members of Bernard's family.

"I'm not happy about it," daughter Gail Richardson of Winnipeg said of the manslaughter plea. "I think it still should have been first degree murder, but I will have to take what I've got."

Richardson also expressed discontent with the proposal of a sentencing circle.

"I think it's making a mockery out of aboriginal ways. This is a horrific crime. He slaughtered her."

Gloade's lawyer Stan MacDonald explained the sentencing circle could only recommend outcomes to the judge and whether that recommendation is accepted is up to the presiding judge's discretion. As a native, Gloade has the right to a circle and ultimately it's his choice, he said.

"He accepts responsibility for what happened with his grandmother. There's no happy outcome with this, but it's an acceptable plea," said MacDonald.

MacLeod, another of Bernard's daughters, also expressed her outrage at the day's happenings.

"The sentencing circle is to bring about healing, to repair the harm done. How can you possibly repair the harm done?" she asked.

"He's never been made to take responsibility, he's never been held accountable for anything he's ever done," she added.

Gloade sat quietly throughout the short court proceedings except to whisper "yes," when Judge John MacDougall asked him to confirm his guilty plea.

However, Gloade seemed to find his voice after he left the courtroom.

As media waited for him to emerge from the courthouse he could be heard shouting obscenities from inside.

Gloade will face a preliminary inquiry for first degree murder Oct. 21 as well as a charge of failing to report to a supervisor at 14 Court St.

It's official: We work too much says study

PAUL MCLEOD

A lot of Nova Scotians complain they work too much. Now they've got science to back them up.

A new study from GPI Atlantic shows not only are Nova Scotians working too much, but work has eaten into their leisure time more and more over the past decade.

According to GPI, we spend five hours and 40 minutes a day on free time, which is half an hour less than in the 1990s.

It doesn't sound like much of a difference, but it adds up to over 200 hours a year spent working instead of playing.

"We work inordinately long hours compared to the free world," said Saint Mary's University professor Andrew Harvey, who authored the report.

"We need to take a hard look at work hours and work regimens."

The study also put a dollar value on how much free time is lost.

They used a system based on other studies that show people will give up income as long as it gives them twice as much time (so people are willing to take two hours off, if it only cost them one hour's worth of wages.)

GPI then halved the average wage of $17.54 an hour to calculate Nova Scotians are losing $1.25 billion worth of free time each year compared to what they were 10 years ago.

Harvey said the government needs to step in to ensure Nova Scotians work less and that this could even help the economy.

"It might just help it, according to research that's been done. Because when people are working their butts off they aren't working productively."

"We might be slightly less productive in one sense. But we might be much more healthy and productive in another."

Harvey said many European nations work much fewer hours, but their economies are strong.

Single moms lost the most free time — an average of 2.7 hours a day below '90s levels — according to GPI.

The leisure activity that was dropped the most was reading.

"But the candidates have the right to be in the building during reasonable hours."

Illness rates higher in mostly black community: Study

DEVIN STEVENS
for Metro Halifax

PRESTON A mostly black Nova Scotian community outside Halifax has higher rates of heart disease, mental illness and diabetes than its white counterparts.

That's the finding of a new study comparing illness in Preston with seven mostly white Nova Scotian communities with about the same size and economics.

"It does not surprise me at all," said Irvine Carvery, president of the Africville Genealogy Society.

"The history of health-care delivery has been shamefully woeful in the African Nova Scotian community."

The study, conducted in part by Dalhousie University, and published in the Canadian Medical Association Journal, says Preston has higher rates of heart disease, strokes, and psychiatric disorders.

The level of type-2 diabetes is 43 per cent higher than the provincial average.

The study said about 86 per cent of Preston residents are black, compared to about two per cent of

Capital Health

- Capital Health issued a news release yesterday with several officials commending the study.
- They said it would allow Capital Health to target resources where they're needed most.

the provincial population. The study doesn't offer causes for the higher rates, but rules out excessive smoking and drinking, distance to hospitals, or environmental hazards.

The area's MLA also says he's not surprised, adding Preston's cancer rates are above normal as well. Keith Colwell chalks it up to a lack of education.

The school board denied the area access to a lot of basic educational rights until the mid-1970s, Colwell said. He said the community had to file a class-action lawsuit for change to take effect.

"This really happened," said Colwell. "If you don't give somebody the opportunity to earn an education, their ability to earn an income is reduced ... that means you don't have access to some things that may prevent illness down the road."

Thibault will support local injection site if Halifax does

paul.mcleod@metronews.ca

HEALTH Liberal Health critic Robert Thibault said yesterday he would support an injection clinic in Halifax if the community wants one.

Canada's only safe injection site, Insite in Vancouver, has become a target for the federal Conservatives, who challenge the legality of providing drug users a place to shoot up.

But the medical and scientific communities have largely rallied around the site for reducing drug-related deaths, curbing the spread of HIV and other health benefits.

ver to see Insite, and came back hoping to see a similar program in Halifax one day.

West Nova MP and Liberal health critic Robert Thibault told Metro yesterday he would support a similar site in Halifax if the addictions services community felt it was needed.

"The people of Halifax know what is best for Halifax," said Thibault. "If there is support for (a safe injection site) then we should go for it."

But he said the decision to pursue the site would have to be made at the provincial level.

"In my mind the decision is made at the level of the province," he said. "The premier would have to come to me."

Canada Post agrees to pretty up mail boxes

Councillor pushes for art policy to apply to federal body

"It's one-stop shopping for the arts."

Coun. Sue Uteck on HRM's new art policy

Coun. Sue Uteck was ready to declare war on Canada Post yesterday.

In a committee of the whole discussion on a new public art policy, the Northwest Arm-South End councillor said she was disappointed with Canada Post's inaction on prettying up their mail boxes. She called them "the worst corporate offender" and contrasted them to Aliant, which has painted murals on many of their utility boxes around town.

She asked Mayor Peter Kelly to not allow any more post boxes in the city until they come up with an artistic program. "Let's wage a little public war," she said.

Since Canada Post boxes are under federal jurisdiction, Uteck wasn't able to make good on her ultimatum. She settled for asking Kelly to inform Canada Post of the municipality's new public art policy instead.

Genevieve Latour, a spokeswoman for Canada Post, said after four years of pilot projects, a program will start next month. She said whenever they replace a post box in the HRM, its replacement will have decals on it. She said she didn't know what the decals would look like.

"It will certainly look good," she said. "We have made a lot of progress."

It will likely take until the spring of 2009 before the new boxes will be seen around town, she said.

Meanwhile, Uteck was thrilled council approved the new public art policy. Since amalgamation, only one new public art piece has been installed.

The new policy will make it easier to get art out there, and also take pieces out that don't fit anymore.

Plus all building developers will have to pay one per cent of their construction costs towards public art.

There are thousands of art pieces in a warehouse in Burnside that could be used, Uteck said, even as rotating artwork inside buildings.

The new policy will make it easier for groups to put art in their communities, Uteck said in an interview.

"It's one-stop shopping for the arts."

Burnside business park plan given approval in principle

JENNIFER TAPLIN

Imagine living so close to work you could almost touch it.

North American Development Group, which owns Dartmouth Crossing, submitted an application to the city for a zoning request so they can add a residential component. It would cozy up the City of Lakes office park.

"There are key advantages to that: They're right next to Shubie Park, next to commercial areas, and it would reduce the need for transit because people are more able to walk to where they work," said East Dartmouth-The Lakes Coun. Andrew Younger.

Yesterday, council discussed how to best manage business parks as they approved in principle their functional plan for Burnside and neighbouring Dartmouth Crossing.

Colin Ogden commutes home from downtown on his unicycle yesterday. He uses a unicycle since his bike was stolen last year and he can take his unusual method of transportation inside.

Younger added an amendment to call for public consultation on mixing the commercial and the residential in Dartmouth Crossing.

"It would reduce the need for transit because people are able to walk to where they work."

Andrew Younger

The functional plan looks at making sure the appropriate businesses are in the right spots within Burnside.

"Burnside has everything from heavy industrial scrap yards to offices," Younger said. "We want to make sure those rules are followed so you don't end up with a meat-packing district next to an office building."

All business parks will be included in an overall business-park management plan, which should be finished in about eight months.

With Burnside now taken care of, the next park on the agenda will be Bayers Lake.

Citizen's campaign targets out-of-district candidates

POLICY It's perfectly legal for municipal election candidates to live in one district and run for office in another area of their home municipality, but one local resident says that rule should be changed, and he wants his current councilor ousted.

Bob White, an unemployed resident of Cape Breton Regional Municipality's District 3, mailed out at least 200 pamphlets this week urging voters not to re-elect Coun. Lee McNeil. Instead, the flyer asks people to "vote for one of our own in District 3."

McNeil, who is completing her first four-year term on council, has lived just inside District 5 since the 2004 election campaign, but spent most of her life in District 3.

"It might be legal but it's definitely not right," said White. "From the feedback I'm getting, the majority agree with me."

White said he is not attacking McNeil personally, but believes strongly that a local representative should live in the area. While McNeil might live near the boundary, close is not good enough, White said.

"It might be legal, but it's definitely not right. From the feedback I'm getting, the majority agree with me."

Bob White

White said he has asked all councilors and the mayor to have the rule changed.

When told it is a regulation under provincial law, White said he will continue to press for a change.

McNeil said White is part of a "dirty campaign" to discredit her, but White said he is not working on anyone else's campaign. That's why the flyer simply lists his name and e-mail address.

McNeil said many of her constituents know where she lives and the issue has never come up until now.

Men strut their stuff for YWCA

PAUL MCLEOD
paul.mcleod@metronews.ca

Heel, toe. Heel, toe. Face.

If you saw a small army of men waddling around Parade Square in high heels yesterday you weren't hallucinating.

Fifty men dragged their heels around downtown Halifax in support of the YWCA's Walk a Mile In Her Shoes charity.

A large crowd of supporters cheered the men on. There were laughs and cheers, but a noticeable absence of grace.

Many men wobbled uncomfortably. Every change in terrain — red carpets, steps, slight inclines — seemed to lead to certain disaster.

Some clutched guard rails for dear life while taking on stairs.

And yet, the event went off without a hitch and not a single person fell. Most participants spent the majority of the walk laughing, despite the toe-shattering pain.

"I see what the girls have been complaining about now," said one man.

The fundraiser went towards the YWCA's housing program to support women at a critical turning point in their lives.

"I see what the girls have been complaining about now."

Walk a Mile participant

The top fundraising group was Eastlink. Employees raised over $4,000, which was matched by the company for a total of $9,373.

Donations are still coming in but so far the top individual fundraiser is local publisher Neville Gilfooy, who, incidentally, looked quite comfortable wearing his high heels.

"It's all in the hips," he said as he swaggered down Gottingen Street.

Pledges for the drive will continue to come in until October 1.

Organizer Tanis Crosby said the event was so successful, the walk may be reprised again next year.

"We got a hugely positive response from the community," said Crosby. "It was phenomenal. We're so happy."

Patrick McGrath, vice-president of research at the IWK Health Centre, holds onto a railing as he eases his way down some steps at Grand Parade yesterday. Fifty men took a stroll around Grand Parade in high heels for a YWCA fundraiser called Walk a Mile in Her Shoes.

News in brief

MANUFACTURING When Grohmann Knives Ltd. lost a contract to supply knives to Canadian paratroopers, Nova Leather Ltd. took a hit. The company, in the Stellarton Industrial Park, used to manufacture leather sheaths for the specialized paratrooper knives. That means a loss of between 5,000 and 6,000 leather cases for Nova Leather. Grohmann had supplied knives to the Canadian Armed Forces since 1964, but lost the contract to Ontario-based Gear Up Motors, which is believed to have imported knives from China. That created a controversy when Green party leader Elizabeth May called on Defence Minister Peter MacKay to ensure contracts are sourced locally.

ACCIDENTS A group of tow truck drivers say RCMP officers play favourites when it comes to the companies they choose to respond to highway crashes. Doug Corbett, whose tow truck operation is based out of Central Caribou, says his business is suffering because police are bypassing the West Pictou companies in favour of tow companies on the East Pictou tow line. It's a favouritism Corbett says has been going on for years. "Police are choosing to use New Glasgow tow truck operators even when an accident occurs in the Pictou area," he said.

Accidental vacation meant to be

SYDNEY When an Argentine woman landed in Sydney, N.S., instead of Sydney, Australia, she decided to make the best of it.

However, Monique Rozanes Torres Agüero, an artist from Buenos Aires, didn't expect to become an instant celebrity.

"I am very surprised and tickled pink," she said in French through Christiane Tanner of Westmount, who has since befriended Agüero. Tanner said after the news broke Friday in the Cape Breton Post, there was a media explosion.

"We were with media all day, from one to the next. It was a fun day."

Everywhere they have gone, they have been recognized, Agüero said.

"We were walking on the sidewalk in Baddeck and two elderly men shot up from a bench and said, 'You are the one from Australia.'"

Wednesday, Agüero landed in Sydney aboard Air Canada Jazz thinking she was in Sydney, Australia. She had purchased the tickets on the Internet. Torres Agüero returned to the airport Thursday to purchase a new ticket and continue on to Australia, but some confusion changed her mind and she decided to vacation in Cape Breton. Air Canada Jazz staff discovered Tanner was in the airport and introduced the two women.

Tanner had flown into Sydney after being in Paris visiting family.

She not only took Agüero under her wing, but also into her home.

Agüero, widow of the late artist Leopoldo Torres Agüero, is a well-known, award-winning sculptor whose works have been exhibited in museums in Argentina and Paris.

On Friday, Tanner took Agüero to the Cape Breton Centre for Craft and Design, where they took part in workshops and met local artists. "The exhibits were beautiful," Tanner said. "She loved that."

Saturday they began doing the 'tourist thing.'

"We drove up the Cabot Trail, took pictures, stayed in Cheticamp, visited the museum and saw all the beautiful hooking and had lobster."

They travelled to Pleasant Bay for a whale watching tour Saturday.

"It was a great moment when she got to see whales for the first time."

Today's plans include a visit to the Fortress of Louisbourg. They also plan to visit the Alexander Graham Bell Museum and a Marble Mountain sculptor.

"She wants to meet some artists who do the type of work she does."

However, their adventures appear to have only just begun. Agüero invited Tanner to visit Argentina. "She wants me to come when it is warm to enjoy her house by the sea, where her workshop is."

Agüero does not think their meeting was accidental, Tanner added. "She feels it was meant to happen, she feels close to me. We have a lot in common, our way of life and way of thinking."

New energy incentives for building owners

REBATE The province is offering apartment building owners thousands of dollars to make buildings more energy efficient.

The new EnerGuide program will offer landlords up to $9,500 in rebates.

The federal and provincial governments will split the cost.

"Whether you increase insulation or improve the air tightness of your property, investing in energy efficiency is an effective way for Nova Scotians to better protect themselves from the rising cost of fuel," said Richard Hurlburt, minister responsible for Conserve Nova Scotia.

Buildings will be tested before and after environmental upgrades. The rebate depends on the work.

Immigration plan concerns provinces

The federal Conservatives plan to limit acceptance of skilled workers applying to come to Canada to only 38 occupations, a move that will not serve provincial labour needs, says Ontario immigration minister Michael Chan.

The proposed changes, he said, were discussed at a meeting between Immigration Minister Diane Finley and her provincial counterparts in Ottawa earlier this month. Now provinces are concerned they will have to expand their own immigration programs, Chan said.

Those applicants whose occupations are not on the list, he said, would have to apply through

"The (federal) plan would require economic-class immigrants to clear two hurdles."

Michael Chan

provincial "nominee" programs — a move that, in effect, downloads a large part of the immigration burden on to provincial governments.

"The (federal) plan would require economic-class immigrants to clear two hurdles," Chan told a news conference in Toronto yesterday.

One is a new occupational test. The other is the points system, which is already in place.

The new occupational requirement system would allow Ottawa to reject most applicants on the basis of its occupation priority list, he said.

Neither Finley nor Chan would release the list of occupations. Finley said yesterday the government is still meeting with stakeholders and will release it later this fall. The list is part of the Harper government's sweeping immigration reforms to pick and choose which immigrants are admitted to Canada.

Four provinces, seven states enter climate deal

CARBON TRADING Seven Western U.S. states and four Canadian provinces yesterday proposed a carbon trading program plan designed to reduce global warming pollution by 15 per cent from 2005 levels by 2020.

Now each state and province is to make laws and rules that fit the plan outlined by the Western Climate Initiative (WCI). The goal is to establish in 2012 the biggest carbon market in the Western Hemisphere over a region that includes about 85 million people.

Under the WCI plan, trading of emission allowances would set a price for carbon to encourage energy conservation and use of cleaner technologies.

The WCI proposal would require states to auction off at least 10 per cent of tradable carbon credits to power companies and other polluters.

Gunman left trail of hatred on Internet

Finland school rampage leaves 11 dead

Student gunman Matti Saari, who killed 10 people at a Finnish school yesterday before shooting himself, left a trail of Internet postings about hatred and revenge.

But according to a former classmate, the 22-year-old travel and restaurant trade student from the western Finnish town of Kauhajokki bore no resemblance to the loner profile of many mass murderers.

Lions ruining the York name

Football coach McLean blunt in assessment of team's chances

YorkReport

"Marty," the email started, "you might want to change your name, or start a petition for York University to change its name."

The emailer didn't need to elaborate. I got the point immediately. York, after all, not only happens to be my surname, but my alma mater, too. And York's football team is absolutely dreadful. After four games this season, the Lions are 0-4 and have been outscored by an aggregate total of — brace yourself — 240-17.

York's new head coach,

The 100-year mystery of the Cubs

Chicago Cubs legend Ernie Banks has a new book coming out, coinciding with his ex-team's post-season journey, and he divulges in it that a voodoo priestess told him when he was a child that he'd be a famous baseball player. The book is called Hoodoo: Unraveling the 100-year Mystery of the Cubs. The Cubs hope to end their 100-year World Series drought next month with a championship.

ex-Edmonton Eskimos linebacker Mike McLean, makes no attempts to camouflage his team's deficiencies. I asked him yesterday if it is likely that York will record a winless season.

"Yes, it is," he said. Does he see light at the end of the tunnel?

"It'll take time to get there," he said. "We inherited players who have old habits they need to break and we need to do some good recruiting (in the off-season)."

McLean, who never missed the CFL playoffs during his Eskimos career (1986 to 1992), took a winless Edmonton Huskies team before he ultimately coached it to the Canadian Junior Football League championship a few years back. He hopes to record a similar turnaround with York. In the meantime, though, York's follies are depressing him. They're not doing much for me, either.

• Yankee Stadium is history but, in his late 90s, legendary public-address announcer Bob Sheppard is not.

Sheppard's battling health issues, but he was able to participate in the stadium's closing ceremonies Sunday night by recording the Yankees' lineup from home. He plans to be announcing at the new Yankee Stadium next season, but get this:

Thanks to modern technology, Sheppard may be introducing lineups at Yankee Stadium long after we're all gone. Computer wizards are working with Sheppard this week to record his voice enough so that, down the road, they can ensure his announcements eternally at Yankee Stadium.

• Steiner Sports, which has partnered with the Yankees to sell stadium memorabilia, is offering a 30-by-18-inch piece of the centre-field scoreboard for $699 U.S., and a 10-by-10-foot hunk of blue carpet from the clubhouse for $10,000. Also on the block are five glass shower-stall doors from the clubhouse for $2,000 apiece ... Yankees captain Derek Jeter was spotted celebrating at a New York bar the other night with a bevy of young ladies and a few rounds of $200-a-glass Remy Martin Louis XIII ... And the Tampa Bay Rays celebrated their first post-season qualification in their clubhouse last week with, believe it or not, 25 cases of beer and 212 bottles of champagne.

Marty York has been a groundbreaking sports columnist and broadcaster in Canada for decades.

Plekanec leads Canadiens' attack

The Montreal Canadiens gave their fans many reasons to cheer last night.

But instead of playing in front of a hometown crowd at the Bell Centre the Habs put on a show for fans in Roberville, Que., defeating the Buffalo Sabres 3-2.

Roberville earned the opportunity to host the pre-season tilt after winning this year's Kraft Hockeyville contest on CBC.

Along with hosting the game, the town got $100,000 to upgrade the arena.

Tomas Plekanec led the Canadiens attack with two goals last night. He got the Habs going 10:21 in the first to make it 1-0 entering the first intermission.

Andrei Kostitsyn, who also assisted on Plekanec's first goal, scored a short-handed goal with less than four minutes left in the second. Plekanec got his second of the night, also short-handed, to make it 3-0 after two.

Derek Roy and Nathan Gerbe got third period tallies for the Sabres, but Buffalo was unable to find an equalizer.

In other pre-season action last night:

Islanders 2 Bruins 1 —

Montreal Canadiens forward Andrei Kostitsyn, centre, scores a short-handed goal on Buffalo Sabres goalie Patrick Lalime, right, during the second period of their pre-season NHL game in Roberville, Que., last night. The Canadiens defeated the Sabres 3-2.

Trevor Smith tallied 2:03 into overtime with the New York Islanders topped Boston, 2-1, in pre-season action from the Moncton Coliseum.

Jon Sim also hit the net for the Islanders. Yann Danis and Joey MacDonald combined to stop 18-of-19 shots.

Dennis Wideman tallied for the Bruins, who were coming off a spirited 8-3 win over Montreal in their exhibition opener on Monday.

Tuukka Rask made 36 saves in the loss.

Lightning 3 Rangers 2 — Martin St. Louis' tally at the 10-minute mark of the second period proved to be the game-winner, as the Tampa Bay Lightning defeated the New York Rangers, 3-2, in pre-season action from the St. Pete Times Forum.

Steven Stamkos, the No. 1 pick in the 2008 draft, and Ryan Craig also scored for the revamped Lightning. Mike Smith made 38 saves in the win.

Fighting for their attention

Former Mooseheads player Marchand trying to make Bruins squad

MATTHEW WUEST

matthew.wuest@metronews.ca

Brad Marchand took the phrase "fighting for a roster spot" a little too literally on his first day of training camp.

The Hammonds Plains native and Boston Bruins hopeful threw down the gloves with fellow prospect Jordan Knackstedt last week in Wilmington, Mass., in one of those occasional intra-squad moments that always causes a stir.

But if Marchand is causing a stir, the former junior scoring sensation is accomplishing exactly what he wants to as he enters his rookie season as a professional.

"I don't think I'm going to go out there and be a top two line guy with the skill they have in Boston, so I want to show I can play any role," Marchand said. "I would like to be a pest, draw penalties, give some hits and do the little things right.

"If I do that, hopefully they'll want to keep me around."

The 5-foot-9 forward downplayed the fight.

Knackstedt had taken exception to a Marchand hit, but the two were gassed after a training session and a long practice and only threw a few punches champs face off against the Boston Bruins at 7 p.m., and Zetterberg, Johan Franzen, Niklas Kronwall and Chris Osgood are slated to dress. Marian Hossa, Pavel Datsyuk and Nicklas Lidstrom will get the night off.

each before coaches broke them apart.

"We didn't speak right away after, but later on we gave each other a tap and life goes on," Marchand said. "Those things happen. It was a couple of guys battling for a spot."

Marchand, who is in Halifax this week as the Bruins hold training camp at Cole Harbour Place, will likely be assigned to the American Hockey League's Providence Bruins to start the season. But he impressed Boston head coach Claude Julien in Monday's 8-3 victory over the Montreal Canadiens.

"Brad did a great job," Julien said. "He competed hard, he was on the puck and he had some scoring chances. We were hoping he'd sneak in one."

Marchand, who the Bruins drafted 71st overall in 2006, had an ignominious end to his impressive junior career when he was benched for the final game of the Halifax Mooseheads' playoff run, which ended in a semifinal flop.

The 20-year-old hasn't forgotten how things ended here. "I learned how consistent you have to be night in and night out," Marchand said. "It comes with maturity. I'm trying to take last year, roll with it, and learn from it."

Pictou keeps Lions from first win

JR. A HOCKEY The Halifax Lions are still looking for their first win after a 3-2 setback at the hands of the Pictou County Weeks Crushers last night.

Jeremy Sheppard scored twice and Trent MacDonald had a single to pace the Crushers to victory in Maritime Junior A Hockey League action before a crowd of 400 at the Halifax Forum.

Chad Locke and Jordan Stapleton scored for Lions, who dropped to 0-3-2 and visit the Dieppe Commandos Saturday.

Sports in brief

FOOTBALL Saint Mary's Huskies wide receiver Shawn White was named Atlantic University Sport football's offensive player of the week yesterday. He had 107 yards and two touchdowns in a 50-20 win over the Mount Allison Mounties Friday. Huskies rookie Jahmeek Murray earned the special teams nod after collecting 156 return yards Friday.

Canadians only one win away

BASEBALL The Halifax Pelham Canadians are one win away from their first Nova Scotia Senior Baseball League championship since 1992.

The Canadians beat the Kentville Wildcats 3-2 last night at Mainland Common to grab a 3-0 stranglehold in the best-of-seven final. Mark Pelham and Ryan Veinot had two singles apiece and Adam Lucas had a double. Pitcher Andrew MacIntosh, playing with a rib injury, surrendered just three hits through seven innings of work. Right-hander Perry Deveau struck out Rob Sheppard with the bases loaded and the game on the line in the ninth inning.

The Canadians can wrap things up tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Kentville. Left-hander Barrett Bellefontaine, a league all-star this season, will be on the mound for the Canadians.

A win would earn Halifax a spot at the senior baseball championships with host Dartmouth Moosehead Dry.

MATTHEW WUEST/METRO HALIFAX

Cheremetiev returns tonight for Mooseheads

The Halifax Mooseheads will welcome Yuri Cheremetiev back to the lineup tonight, but they'll have to wait a little bit longer for Tomas Knotek and Logan MacMillan to return.

Cheremetiev, a 19-year-old centre who was cut Monday from a tryout with the Boston Bruins, will dress for the Mooseheads (1-3) when they visit the Bathurst Titan (3-0-1) at 7 p.m.

Knotek is nursing a groin injury and MacMillan is still at training camp with the Anaheim Ducks. Defenceman Richard Greer also remains out of the lineup with a groin injury.

Subaru lands a knockout

Revamped Impreza adds some pizzazz to a reliable ride

LORNE DRURY
for Metro Canada

Subaru has built a reputation over the years of producing safe, reliable, and functional vehicles.

While far from being disasters in the styling arena, most Subarus have never had what you would call that "knock-out" punch when it comes to looks. Much like the Volvos of yesteryear, Subaru became known for solid, dependable vehicles that tended to blend in with the crowd and didn't set hearts aflutter.

But that appears to be changing as a look at Subaru's 2008 Impreza lineup will attest.

I recently spent a few days with the Impreza 2.5i five-door hatchback, decked out with the fancy Sport Package, and it was impressive both from a looks and performance standpoint.

The Impreza is an all-new car for 2008 and the 2.5i Sport five-door is the best looking model in the lineup in my opinion. Subarus may be changing from a design standpoint, but they continue to offer what has made them popular in the first place, functionality and, of course, their trademark all-wheel drive feature standard on all models.

On the five-door models, Subaru's new design for the Impreza features a sweeping roof line curve that flows into an aerodynamic rear spoiler. Front and centre is Subaru's new spread-wing logo design at the top of the wider grille. There's also a character line sweeping upward at the rear that produces a distinctive look.

Now in its third generation, the Impreza for 2008 comes in both four-door sedan (unique to the North American market) and five-door hatchback body styles with a choice of five-speed manual or four-speed automatic transmission with Sportshift. Both sedan and five-door are available with the Sport Package or turbocharged WRX option.

The basic powerplant is a 2.5-litre Boxer engine, delivering 170 hp and 170 lb/ft of torque. The WRX gets the 2.5-litre with a turbocharger and double overhead cams to produce 224 hp and 226 lb/ft of torque.

Prices start at $20,695 for the 2.5i sedan with manual transmission. The 2.5i five-door is $21,595, while the 2.5i sedan with Sport Package is $23,195 and the five-door Sport is $24,895. The WRX sedan with manual is $32,995 and the WRX five-door prices out at $33,895. Add $1,100 for the automatic transmission.

Standard features on all Imprezas include anti-lock braking system (ABS) with electronic brake-force distribution (EBD), front disc and rear drum brakes, driver and front passenger front and side-impact airbags and side curtain airbags, 16-inch steel wheels, power heated mirrors, AM/FM/MP3/WMA audio system with four speakers, air conditioning, cruise control, 60/40 split folding rear seats and cloth upholstery.

The Sport Package adds rear disc brakes, brake assist, vehicle dynamics control system and traction control, 16-inch aluminum alloy wheels, body colour door handles, halogen fog lamps, windshield wiper de-icer, leather wrapped steering wheel and gear selector, heated front seats and an enhanced audio system.

My time with the Impreza was uneventful from a weather standpoint, so I really had little chance to put the symmetrical all-wheel drive system to the test.

Subaru offers two types of all-wheel drive systems on the Impreza that are mated to the manual or automatic transmission.

In both cases, the system reacts to wheel slip-page and power is supplied to the wheels with the best traction.

Inside, the cabin is comfortable with more hip and shoulder room than on previous models. The door opening has also been enlarged to make it easier to get in and out. A longer wheelbase 9.5 cm (3.7 inches) results in more rear seat legroom.

A new feature is a Hill Holder Incline Start Assist to prevent vehicle roll-back, standard on 2.5i Sport and WRX models equipped with manual transmissions.

Competitive pricing, a new emphasis on design and Subaru's continued refinement of the mechanical components, make the 2008 Impreza a solid choice in the compact segment, which made up more than 25 per cent of all vehicles sold in Canada last year.

It's time to start thinking about this winter.

An illuminating idea in lighting

Ceravision Ltd., the company working on the ultra energy-efficient Ecolumination lighting range, recently partnered with leading English motor racing team to demonstrate its automotive lighting system.

A set of headlights was fitted to a BMW race car and tested at Silverstone, the home of the British F1 Grand Prix.

Ceravision's Ecolumination technology is a revolutionary, high-quality, low-cost, energy-efficient lighting system, which uses microwave technology to power electrode-less bulbs.

The bulbs are simple to adapt to existing designs and are mercury-free. Ecolumination is leading innovation in the global lighting industry, bringing new levels of efficiency and quality to both indoor and outdoor lighting.

With the success of the initial testing, Ceravision is now seeking development partners in the automotive lighting industry to bring the headlights rapidly to market.

The system is available for licensing by qualified manufacturers.

With zero to 100 flashing by in 5.5 seconds, the Saab 9-3 Turbo X is the fastest model from the automaker.

Saab surging on turbo power

MICHAEL BANOVSKY
for Metro Canada

Saab 9-3 Turbo X

Type: Sedan

Price: $54,995

Engine: 2.8-litre V6

HP: 280

Highlights

- Fastest Saab ever
- All-wheel drive

The secret to a great Saab is to let the Swedes do their own thing. The 93. The 96. The 99 Turbo. The 900 Turbo. And now the 9-3 Turbo X. They're all models that deliver on engineering prowess, Swedish sensibility, and now, all-weather performance.

Yeah, the Turbo X has all-wheel drive. I mentioned engineering prowess for a reason, because through its history, Saab has pioneered unique solutions for its vehicles. With their low-volume production, Saab makes a perfect candidate to pioneer new GM technologies.

For the car's XWD ('cross' wheel drive) system, Saab partnered with Haldex to deliver a drivetrain that can split power fore and aft, plus side to side between the rear wheels.

Unlike past Haldex systems, torque is distributed throughout the drivetrain from a standstill. Older systems needed a certain amount of wheel spin to send torque to the required wheel, but XWD is ready instantly.

Performance fiends take note: Saab says the system's rear eLSD (electronic limited-slip differential) will "increase the performance envelope at high lateral acceleration." More on that in a moment.

At the heart of the car is a massaged and turbocharged 2.8-litre V6, good for the mentioned 280 horsepower and 295 lb-ft of torque. It's torque, with a strong powerband and turbo surge — and not unlike Volvo's similar-displacement turbocharged six-cylinder engine. There's a character to all turbo'd sixes, with Saab's being more raucous than most because of its lovely exhaust.

But fastest Saab ever? Zero to 100 flashes by in 5.5 seconds... so yeah... fastest Saab ever.

Once behind the wheel, Saab is adamant that they have the best integration of all-wheel-drive with the "vehicle's various systems."

But they're right. Saabs usually handle like they're on a slope of a roof, fun for a second until you're on the way down.

The Turbo X, though, is tenacious, feeling more like an Audi RS4 than anything in recent memory. High praise.

As it stands, the Turbo X is a great car that shows there is still a lot of potential for future world-beating Saabs.

If an all-wheel-drive Saab with 280 horsepower costing over $54,995 (and $56,305 for the sexy Sport-Combi) makes you excited, the queue has already formed.

Mazda creates a big beauty

Crossover CX-9 makes a family drive more fun and less stressful

MICHAEL GOETZ
for Metro Canada

The Mazda CX-9 GT came to class ready for anything we could throw at it. And when it graduated, the crossover vehicle was sporting a very impressive report card.

The CX-9 is Mazda's largest vehicle. Now that minivans aren't cool enough — and many automakers, like Mazda, no longer feel the need to offer one — the seven-seater CX-9 fills the role as the brand's premier people mover.

It's based on the Mazda 6 platform, which has been modified and massaged for its new duty. It shares the 273-hp 3.7-litre V6 doing duty in the Lincoln MKS, and said V6 is hooked up to a six-speed Aisin automatic transmission.

The most inexpensive CX-9 is the FWD GS model, at

2009 Mazda CX-9

Highlights

- Long-haul specialist

about $39,995. But ours was the most expensive CX-9 in the catalogue — a fully optioned GT model ($51,710).

GT models start the proceedings at about $46,825; its most notable enhancement over GS models is the lovely 20-inch wheel and tire set. Our baby also got AWD ($2,000), DVD system with Bose 5.1 surround-sound stereo with 11 speakers and wireless headphones ($2,675), and a package that included copious luxury bits, navigation with Bluetooth, and rear-view camera ($1,520).

We won't list the standard safety and convenience features, because, believe us, it's not lacking in any.

Topping our lists of positives is styling. Beauty is always in the eye of the beholder, so go and behold yourself, but we think Mazda did a great job in marrying sporty details — like those lights, wheels and integrated exhaust tips — into a sleek people-mover format.

The look and feel of the inside of the vehicle also garnered its share of raves. The faux wood used throughout the cabin is a dark, heavily lacquered variety, symbolic of a type found in traditional Japanese art work.

However, while touchscreen controls are cool and high tech, most of us would still prefer durable and easy-to-reach controls for items that need frequent adjusting. And while the wrap-around centre console is beautiful to behold, a few of us thought it made the cab-in feel less spacious.

Customers more obsessed with chassis dynamics will also be pleasantly surprised. The vehicle performs better than its size and weight would indicate.

The front seats and driving position were also praised. They are crucial cogs in the CX-9's prowess as a long-haul specialist. Also, the DVD player/babysitter might have a little hand in keeping the stress levels down on long family rides.

The second row is 60/40 split-bench affair that can slide fore and aft, so there is a ton of legroom to be had back there.

Fuel economy is not stellar, but this shouldn't be a big shock as the CX-9 is what it is — a big crossover. Energuide ratings are: 14.0 L/100 km city, 9.7 L/100 km hwy. And note that you pay a discernable premium for AWD: the FWD CX-9 is rated at 13.2 L/100 km City, 9.0 L/100 km Hwy.

Holiday in Cambodia

48 hours in ancient empire, tourist boomtown

Got 48 hours to explore the ruins of the ancient Angkor empire? This guide will help visitors make the most of the temples and Siem Reap, the tourist town booming in the shadow of Angkor Wat, a 12th-century Hindu-Buddhist temple synonymous with Cambodia visited by more than two million tourists a year.

SATURDAY

7 a.m. — After a quick breakfast, head for the Bayon temple. Its 200 enormous faces smiling down on visitors from stone towers are a must-see.

11 a.m. — Avoid the midday sun with a detour to the National Centre for Khmer Ceramics Revival, where potters recreate ancient Khmer pottery using clay from the nearby hills and fire them in a giant kiln.

12.30 p.m. — Go to Amok Restaurant in Siem Reap for a fish amok, the Khmer curry made by steaming the coconut-based dish in a banana leaf.

1.30 p.m. — Wander around the air-conditioned shops selling silks and trinkets. For the colourful cotton "krama" or gingham check scarves worn by Khmer Rouge fighters, head to the Old Market.

3.30 p.m. — For a quick and unusual snack, try the fried crickets and other creepy crawlies sold on the Siem Reap River bridge. For those less adventurous, try Blue Pumpkin's banana ginger tart and iced coffee.

4 p.m. — Tomb Raider fans will relish the overgrown jungle setting of Ta Prohm temples with its moss-covered walls.

7 p.m. — Catch the latest archaeology gossip with the French team at the Laundry Bar or with the Japanese at Cafe Moi Moi.

8 p.m. — Dine at Le Malraux, a bistro named after a French explorer in the early 1900s. Confit de canard will help you enjoy the atmosphere of the Indochina of bygone years.

8 a.m. — Drive out to Kbal Spean or the Valley of the 1,000 Lingas for a hike to myriad stone lingas carved into the riverbed and boulders on the banks.

1.30 p.m. — Have lunch in Siem Reap. The Indian restaurant serves excellent dosas — thin and crispy.

2.30 p.m. — Watch weaving masters at the Institute of Khmer Traditional Textiles spin, dye and weave silk textiles at their workshop on the edge of town. Journey to their farm to see silk worms being raised and natural dyes made from tree bark and leaves.

4 p.m. — Ancient architecture buffs can study the differences between the 9th-century Bakong and Preah Ko temples and Angkor Wat, which was built centuries later.

6 p.m. — Let a masseuse knead the knots away and work out the kinks at Chai Massage near the road to Angkor Wat.

7 p.m. — Enjoy one last gin and tonic before the journey home at the Foreign Correspondents Club. It's near the river and the garden is the perfect place for a drink.

Ljubljana just lovely

Ljubljana. With some 50,000 university students living in the city, the vibe is abuzz with youth, culture and nightlife. Who knew that the Slovenian capital city I can hardly pronounce would turn out to be one of the hippest spots in Europe.

I ended up in Slovenia, one of the smallest countries in Central Europe, as a result of "Plan B." I was originally supposed to travel to Georgia, but, as the conflict with Russia grew and the tanks rolled in, I figured it probably wasn't the best time to visit.

Anxious for an alternative place to explore, Slovenia seemed like a good choice. I'd fly from Istanbul direct to Ljubljana, the city with a jumble of consonants in a country I knew very little about.

There's something really nice about Ljubljana. It has that manageable, small-city feeling with all the perks of a big one. From theatre to art, fine dining restaurants to trendy boutiques, it fulfills all my requirements of "cool." Most importantly, it's a backpacker-friendly location with a well-established tourist infrastructure and lots of English-speakers.

The landscape, carved with canals and bicycle paths, reminds me of Amsterdam, minus the tacky souvenirs, sleazy sex shops and legalized pot cafés.

Ljubljana's Old Town is rich with Baroque, gothic and Art Nouveau architecture. Footpaths lead to historic castles, frescoes decorate cathedrals and bronze dragon statues guard bridges. But beyond the architecture and famous monuments, it's a chill place with tons of outdoor cafés, perfect for people watching. Down a strip of cobblestones, a parade of scenesters saunter past. Women with big scarves smoke skinny cigarettes. Men rock effeminate styles, oversized sunglasses and the occasional Euro mullet.

Though guidebooks say 'your hair doesn't have to be pink to fit in,' I argue that it sure does help.

For the anti-commercial scene, Metelkova is the place to be. An autonomous zone for off-the-wall artistic expression, this outdoor urban space is devoted to counter-culture. Amidst the graffiti walls and squat-like surroundings there are bars, a few gay clubs, performing art spaces and music venues playing everything from punk to reggae.

The area has an anarchist aura with anti-police graffiti and rockers in black. Though guidebooks say "your hair doesn't have to be pink to fit in," I argue that it sure does help.

Rastas strum guitars, angst-ridden teenagers mope and pit bulls frolic as their tattooed owners drink absinthe. Metelkova is a must-see.

State of the western

PHILIP BROWN
for Metro Canada

One of the best westerns to ride onto screens in years, Ed Harris' new film Appaloosa does a surprisingly good job of reviving and updating the genre — but whether it will strike gold with audiences is another story

There was a time when Hollywood produced a saddle-full of westerns, but by the late '60s the genre was pretty much dead.

Directors like Sam Peckinpah (The Wild Bunch) and Sergio Leone (The Good, The Bad, And The Ugly) created revisionist westerns that toyed with the formula and excited new audiences, yet it almost felt as if there was nowhere left to go in the genre once they were done with it.

There have been numerous attempts to revive the western since then, the most successful being Clint Eastwood's 1992 masterpiece Unforgiven. The film was easily one of the most thought provoking and interesting examples of the genre, sparking a wave of new westerns in the '90s including Jim Jarmusch's quietly brilliant Dead Man, Sam Raimi's kinetic The Quick And The Dead, and the blockbuster Western Tombstone.

They were all solid films, but none was successful enough to breathe new life into the genre. Since then, there has been a new western every few years, but sadly nothing that generated much commercial interest.

Appaloosa — starring actor Viggo Mortensen — is riding high-in-the-saddle among film critics and western fans.

Last year's 3:10 To Yuma proved that westerns could still be bankable, but the success of that movie had more to do with the combined star power of Russell Crowe and Christian Bale than anything else.

The amazing HBO series Deadwood is one of the most remarkable westerns ever created, but despite a cavalcade of awards and critical acclaim it never had much of an audience and was cancelled before reaching the planned concluding fourth season.

Surprisingly, some of the most entertaining westerns to be produced in recent years are wild pop-art experiments to emerge from Asia, including Takashi Miike's Sukiyaki Western Django, and Ji-Woon Kim's upcoming The Good, The Bad, And The Weird.

However, as fun as these movies are, they won't have much impact on this quintessentially American genre.

As long as there are filmmakers with a sense of the history of cinema, there will be westerns, but unfortunately it doesn't look like genre will ever be commercially viable again. The days of John Ford have passed and they may never return.

Clooney ER return unlikely

CASTING The producers of hospital drama ER are hoping to entice George Clooney back for the show's upcoming final season, even though Clooney has said he's not interested, Reuters reports.

ER executive producer David Zabel told TV Guide that story lines had been dreamed up for the show's 15th and last season for all major past characters, including Clooney's Dr. Ross.

But Clooney hasn't been tempted yet.

"He is on record as saying he is not coming back," said Clooney's publicist, Stan Rosenfield. "It is something he has already done. He is busy making movies."

90210 picked up for full season

TV The CW network has picked up nine additional episodes of teen drama 90210, bringing the total order to 22, Reuters reports.

The move marks the first full-season order for a broadcast TV freshman series this season.

The much-buzzed-about Beverly Hills, 90210 spinoff was the first new fall show to premiere. It got off to a blazing start with a two-hour debut that drew 4.9 million viewers and posted the highest-rated series premiere in the CW's two-year history among women 18-34, adults 18-34 and adults 18-49.

The only thing certain in life is uncertainty

Today, I want to talk about uncertainty. I'm just not entirely sure what to say about it.

What started me thinking about this was that this past week I learned of a serious problem inherent in bar stools. My friend, Belle, broke her ankle by falling off one.

Some people might ask, "Was she dancing on the stool at the time?" or "Had she had a few?" Which just goes to show they don't know Belle.

Of course she wasn't dancing on the stool. And of course she'd had a few.

HineSight

Anne Hines

One might argue that the fall was not entirely the stool's fault. But the fact is this tragedy could have been averted if the manufacturer had simply affixed a label saying something like, "Wrapping your foot around this stool in a rather fetching, coquettish manner and then forgetting to unwrap it when you stand up may cause injury."

Instead, we all have to live with the knowledge that bar stool related unpleasantness could happen at any time.

I don't like uncertainty. It makes me feel ... uncertain. A lot of people share this feeling. That's why we turn to paid experts who can assure us of what the future holds. Depending on what amount we're prepared to spend, these professionals are called either financial advisors or telephone psychics.

I consulted a palm reader once. She charged me $40 and told me I'm destined to spend money foolishly. I left thinking she was right.

We want our world to be predictable and stable. The problem is that a) it isn't and b) well, that's it really. And, it's not just what's around us, it's also what's inside us that can turn on a dime.

A few years ago, I was sitting in a boardroom waiting to start a meeting. A woman walked in I'd never met. I thought, "Oh my god. I'm gay." I'm not the only person to have this happen.

Comedian Rosie O'Donnell reports she was motoring home after getting her drivers license when she was struck by this same realization.

Personally, I'm glad I wasn't operating heavy machinery at the time. Sometimes uncertainty feels like falling off a bar stool and sometimes it feels like falling in love.

In any case, no warning label can prepare us for the jolts and joys that lie ahead. Life will surprise us. And that's a good thing. I'm certain.

Anne Hines is an author and humour writer. She has written three novels and one collection of nonfiction humour.

Actor Owen Wilson will feature in and produce Blood Brothers, a comedy centred around the friendship between a man and a vampire. Wilson is reportedly going to be playing the straight man, with his blood-sucking pal yet to be cast. FEMALEFIRST.CO.UK

Symphony returns like a hurricane

New season begins with Hurricane Juan Concerto

PHILIP CROUCHER
philip.croucher@metronews.ca

Symphony Nova Scotia is celebrating more than just its music this season. There is also a significant milestone to commemorate.

The popular orchestra is launching its 25th-anniversary season before the masses tomorrow night at the Rebecca Cohn Auditorium in Halifax.

The kick-off show features Peter Allen's new Hurricane Juan Concerto and the orchestra's performance of Shostakovich's Symphony No. 10.

The 7:30 p.m. premiere is the start of a busy season for the symphony. There are 39 performances, including some featuring well-known guest artists and conductors.

"The anniversary is a big event for the orchestra, and we have some events happening because of it," said music director Bernhard Gueller. "There are some events making this season very special."

That includes tomorrow's opener, which is the world premiere of Allen's Hurricane Juan Concerto, which spans the 12-hour period before, during and after the storm in five movements, and portrays the spirit that brought Nova Scotians together in its aftermath.

Allen, a Halifax pianist and composer, will play piano during the performance.

As for Shostakovich's Symphony No. 10, which closes the show, it is considered one of the most compelling symphonies of the 20th century. The opening performance is Beethoven's Egmont Overture.

"We are very close to the fifth anniversary of that storm," Gueller said of

Halifax ready to fall for flamenco

FESTIVAL The third annual Fall For Flamenco Festival is set to hit Halifax again starting on Saturday.

The event — which runs until Tuesday, Oct. 7 — features concerts, workshops and demonstrations of Flamenco, a Spanish art form that includes song, dance and guitar playing.

The festival kick-off is Saturday with the opening of the exhibition Flamenco In Canada, which will be on display until Nov. 7 at Pier 21's Ralph and Rose Chiodo Harbourside Gallery in Halifax. The exhibit opens at 2 p.m. and features stories and photographs that explore the history and experience of Flamenco in Canada.

On Saturday night there will be the concert Flamenco Con Fusion at 8 p.m. at the North End Church in Halifax. Ticket prices are $20 and $15.

The highlight for the festival goes a week from Saturday, when Spain's Joaquin Ruiz Flamenco Company and guest artist Inmaculada Ortega perform at the Rebecca Cohn Auditorium at 8 p.m.

The show will be the largest venue the festival has held an event in.

"It's growing, it's growing so much," said festival artistic director and founder Maria Osende. "We're a non-for-profit organization, and now we have our first employee."

"So it's growing, and it's working really well."

Ruiz and Ortega will also take part in a dance workshop from Friday, Oct. 3 through Tuesday, Oct. 7.

For more information about the festival, go to www.flamencofestival.ca.

Leary rips hosts

HBO Canada's timing seems iffy

HBOVER HERE: It seems a day late and a pound short, but the corporate partners behind The Movie Network and Movie Central here in Canada are adding HBO Canada to their cable offerings, a new channel available to anyone already subscribing to the two other channels, and designed to feature the full menu of HBO programming, and not just the shows that have already been offered individually here — hit shows like Sex And The City, Deadwood and The Sopranos, or current ones like Entourage, True Blood, Flight Of The Conchords and In Treatment.

HBO Canada will launch next month, and will round out the network's current shows with HBO programming that only arrives here on DVD or after a long delay on basic cable — the sports events, comedy, documentaries and concerts that were once the network's bread and butter, as well as rebroadcasts from HBO's library, which will probably include miniseries and movies such as Angels In America, From The Earth To The Moon and Oz. The new channel is not a partnership — HBO does not have any ownership stake in the new channel, according to a press release, but rather Astral Media and Corus Entertainment have expanded their deal with the U.S. network, which will also see more HBO content appearing on their On Demand channels.

This would have been a big, bold move two or three years ago, when HBO's brand was white hot, but right now it looks more like Corus and Astral are doing HBO the favour, and not the other way around. The U.S. network has had its thunder stolen by its once-marginal competitors since the Sopranos made its halting march to its finale; that last episode, with its abrupt, ambiguous ending, turned out to be prescient, as HBO's profile seemed to diminish just as sharply, though its reputation lingers in a stubborn half-life.

HBO did very well at Sunday's Emmys, picking up a bale of awards for shows like Entourage, In Treatment and especially John Adams, but the relevance of those accolades is debatable when the show pulled its lowest ratings ever — just 12.2 million viewers — and drew an avalanche of critical brickbats for its leaden pacing and disastrous hosting gimmick.

Until HBO can hoist its standard on a couple of new flagship shows, its public image will increasingly revert to the dissipated host of offerings it was famous for during most of its early history — the 25-plus years between its low-profile debut in the heyday of network television until those fateful nights when Carrie Bradshaw tripped down a Manhattan sidewalk in her unfeasibly high heels and Tony Soprano padded out to the end of his driveway to pick up his morning paper.

NBC's LAPD adds personnel

CASTING Tom Everett Scott and Arija Bareikis have joined the cast of NBC's drama pilot LAPD.

In the ensemble cop show, Scott will play Russell, a cop and father of three who's married to a blogger. On the job, he is partnered with Lydia (Regina King). Bareikis will play a uniformed patrol cop who shares her teenage son's love of surfing.

LGBT characters play bigger role

TELEVISION The number of gay and lesbian TV characters on U.S. broadcast networks will double to an all-time high this season, according to a new poll.

There will be 16 regular characters on major-network scripted series this season who are lesbian, gay, bisexual or transgender, according to an annual survey conducted by the Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation. That's more than twice as many as last year and the most ever in the 13 years that GLAAD has been doing the study.

Knight Rider
You asked for it, you got it. When the classic 1980s action show was revived as a TV movie last winter, inquiring minds wanted to know: Will there be a series? And here it is. Justin Bruening returns as Mike, the former Army Ranger assigned to keep superintelligent car KITT out of the wrong hands. Deanna Russo also stars, with Val Kilmer as the voice of KITT. 9 PM on NBC

Gary Unmarried
It's sort of like "The New Adventures of Old Christine" ... if Christine were a guy and a little luckier in love. Jay Mohr ("Ghost Whisperer") has the title role in this new sitcom: a newly divorced dad dealing with kid custody issues, his ex-wife's (Paula Marshall) impending wedding and his own love life. Yes, he's got himself a girlfriend: the lovely Vanessa (Jaime King) whom he met on the job. 9:30 PM on CBS

Monster Moves
Don't tear it down; move it across town! That could be the motto of this series, which chronicles the most ambitious moving projects you'll ever see, whether it's transporting a lighthouse away from a cliff or relocating massive old Egyptian temples to make way for a dam project. 10 PM on DISCOVERY

Renée talks about breast cancer scare

HEALTH Renée Zellweger has opened up about her breast cancer scare, which threatened to halt her career after the success of Jerry Maguire. imdb.com reports.

The actress reveals she found two small masses in her right breast during a self-examination in 1996 and decided to get them checked out.

Zellweger, who lost her grandmother to cancer in 1969, recalls, "I thought, 'Oh, I know what you do now. You find out what that is. So I went and found out.'"

The actress tells America's Self magazine she made an appointment with her doctor in Los Angeles and went to his clinic with a no-nonsense attitude.

"I was like, 'Let's just have it over with. Get in there, stab away, get your little crunchy bit or whatever you're looking for, put it in the mail and we'll call it a day,'" she adds. "Then I had a weird couple of days waiting for the phone call."

Zellweger eventually discovered she had fibroadenomas (benign breast tumours), which she calls, "a fancy word for nothing."

But the experience made her take cancer threats more seriously: "I pay attention, I do go get my checkups."

Spears pics probe

PRIVACY Police in Louisiana are hunting a store worker who has allegedly tried to sell private photographs from the Spears family album. femalefirst.co.uk reports.

Snaps of new mom Jamie Lynn Spears breast feeding her three-month old daughter Maddie have been offered to the media.

The collection of photographs also includes pop star and older sister Britney holding her niece alongside her parents around Jamie Lynn's hospital bed shortly after the teenager gave birth.

Reports claim the photographs were taken on the camera of Jamie Lynn's boyfriend, Casey Aldridge, before he took the camera card to a local store, but extra copies were made by a male employee.

Evacuation irks bare-faced Pam

PEOPLE Pamela Anderson was "mortified" when she had to evacuate a hotel without any makeup on. femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The former Baywatch actress was forced to leave her five-star Paris hotel looking less than glamorous at 9 a.m. after firefighters were called to deal with a suspected gas leak.

Anderson was so distraught at the prospect of being seen with a natural face she reportedly even asked firefighters to help her leave through a secluded entrance, but her request was denied.

"This makes no sense at all..."

by Joe O'Neill

So Louisiana police are hot on the trail of a store worker for allegedly trying to sell photographs of Jamie Lynn Spears breastfeeding her baby. Isn't it sort of understood that one of the fringe benefits of working in a photo booth at Wal-Mart, besides being able to wallpaper your bedroom with pictures of every attractive woman in your hometown, is the opportunity to sell to the highest bidder copies of the private pictures belonging to any celebrity too cheap to have an ink-jet printer at home?

People really ought to go to jail over this one, especially the guy who stole the photos, the person who buys them, and anyone who actually cares about Jamie Lynn Spears and Casey Aldridge.

It's pretty sleazy, and probably illegal in most states, to look at photos of a 17-year-old girl breastfeeding her child, but I doubt I'm the only one who's wondering whether Jamie Lynn squirts milk or Mountain Dew.

Of course the real danger here is that if these pictures get out, it will spoil the surprise of seeing them for the first time in The Family Spears' Season's Greetings Togetherness Christmas Calendar, sure to be a hot seller later this year.
